

Dear FCC,

I was appalled when I learned that Sinclair, a well-known conservative broadcasting group, plans to air a program bashing John Kerry so close to the election.

Unless Sinclair plans to air a similar program bashing George W. Bush (may I suggest Michael Moore's "Fahrenheit 9/11") or a program that supports Kerry, then this programming choice is clearly a political power grab.

Television and radio airwaves belong to the public and must be used in the public's best interest. What Sinclair is doing amounts to free advertising for the Bush campaign and is illegal under FCC regulations.

As a member of the public, I respectfully ask the FCC to investigate Sinclair and either stop this program from airing or require Sinclair to also air either a pro-Kerry program or a similarly anti-Bush program.

Thank you.

Dawna Argenbright